BANNING OF ACCESS TO ACADEMY GROUNDS AFTER HOURS
IMPORTANT LEGAL INFORMATION FOR FAMILIES
23rd April 2024

Dear Families,

Sadly, there has been some recent incidents that have occurred on the Academy football courts after school hours. These have mainly included non-Newsome Students, but there seems to be an increasing number of Newsome Academy children meeting up in these areas.

An incident occurred recently which included dangerous behaviour and criminal damage and I am prosecuting those involved in conjunction with the Police. With this in mind, we are communicating that there will be ban on any unauthorised entry to the premises after school hours.

Please support us in ensuring your child does not engage with the group of youths that seem to dismiss the legal and moral rules that are in place in the community and indeed get themselves included in the legal proceedings that we are pursuing with them. Please also inform them that should they enter the site after this formal notice, that they will also be involved in legal proceedings.

Rest assured that I and the Academy Team will be persistent in ensuring that any anti-social behaviour in our beloved community is dealt with, with rigour.

Yours faithfully,

Mr D Watkin: Headteacher

Apologies for this but you will understand the bigger picture in eradicating such antisocial behaviour.

Also, it's important for our families to see that we take action and care about our community.

Thanks for your support.

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

Night Out Lights Out!

One Punch

As part of West Yorkshire Police's ongoing work to reduce violent crime the Force is raising awareness of how a night out can lead to a fight and the loss of a life.

- The 'One Punch Can Kill' campaign reminds people that in a split second a person can become a killer or be killed.
- We want everyone to be able to enjoy the pubs and clubs in the towns and cities in West Yorkshire, but would encourage people to consider how much alcohol they consume.
- What can start out as a fun night drinking with friends can easily turn into a nightmare.
- Just one punch can ruin the lives of both the victim and the person who throws the punch.

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

The man who killed a stranger with a single punch, and then turned his life around

Jacob Dunne spent his life dealing drugs and getting into fights until, in 2011, he struck a deadly blow. Then meeting his victim's parents changed everything

Newsome
Academy

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

Jacob Dunne loved getting into fights. Every weekend he and his friends would go into Nottingham city centre to start a ruck. One night in the summer of 2011, the 19-year-old threw a single punch. He immediately sensed it was different. There was no resistance, and the victim swayed back. “I knew something bad had happened as soon as I hit him,” he says today. Dunne didn’t hang around. Without a word to his friends, he fled the scene.

A month passed and he began to forget about the incident. If something terrible had happened, he would have heard. But then friends who were out with him that night got in touch. They had been questioned about it. It was inevitable his turn would come. In fact, the finger was already being pointed at him. He discovered that one of his friends had given the police his name.

One day, the police arrived at his mother’s house. He was out, so they called him and told him to hand himself in for questioning; nothing serious. When he turned up at the police station, he was arrested on suspicion of murder. Dunne discovered that 28-year-old trainee paramedic James Hodgkinson, the man he had hit, had died after spending nine days in a coma.

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

“ONE PUNCH CAN KILL”

Dunne was jailed for manslaughter. Because he admitted to his crime and there were mitigating factors (despite his predilection for fighting, he had no criminal record, no weapon was used, and James’s bleed to the brain resulted from his fall rather than Dunne’s single punch to the jaw), he was only sentenced to 30 months in jail, of which he served 14. At the time, Dunne thought he was unlucky. All he had done was throw a random punch on a night out scrapping with his mates. Others thought he was obscenely lucky. Some, including Hodgkinson’s parents, suggested he should have received a far longer sentence.

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

At secondary school, he was troubled. He befriended troubled kids from the Meadows, many of whom came from criminal or dysfunctional families. He couldn't settle, acted the class fool, told teachers he wasn't interested. He was diagnosed with attention deficit hyperactivity disorder and told he was on the autistic spectrum. At 14, he was permanently excluded from his school, which said it could no longer support his education. He had never been violent, just a nuisance.

Out of school, he had time to discover drink and drugs. He wasn't tough, but he soon learned how to fight. "I felt a failure because I had failed in school, but I masked that with the bravado of being a lad's lad. As I became more exposed to people who were hard, I became harder." Did they make him prove himself? "Yes. They'd start a fight and expect you to join in. If you didn't, it would be like, 'What the...? Why didn't you back me up?' Or they'd say, 'You're not really about this life, are you?' and give you an ultimatum. It was all about being tough; earning respect through intimidation."

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

He had been a keen athlete – the best hurdler in school, a decent basketball player and a competitive footballer. But after being kicked out he gave up on sport and the opportunity to be mentored by positive role models.

His mother managed to get him into the local church school just before his GCSEs. But having missed 18 months of school, he didn't stand a chance. "I didn't turn up to do my GCSEs. I was, like, I know I'm going to fail and feel even more rubbish about myself."

With no qualifications, there were few career options available to him. And he didn't much fancy a regular nine-to-five job. So by 16 he was selling drugs. Was he a good dealer? "Not really." Did he make decent money? "Not really. The only thing that makes you a massive amount of money is crack and heroin, and I wouldn't sell that because I would have had to have had it in my mum's house and she was a childminder." He wanted to protect his mother, whom he adored, which makes what happened later even more painful. "I could sell an ounce of weed and make £100. I sold cocaine, but more so I could use it for free.

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

Ten years on, he has written a book about the punch, and how it changed his life and the lives of others. Right from Wrong is part mea culpa, part love letter to his mother, and part manifesto on how to help children from difficult backgrounds to avoid the lifestyle he led. At its heart is the theme of restorative justice. Dunne has been able to rebuild his life largely thanks to Hodgkinson's parents, Joan Scourfield and David Hodgkinson, who wrote to him and eventually met him in an attempt to understand the incomprehensible – why a stranger ran out of nowhere to throw the punch at their beloved son that killed him. It resulted in an extraordinary and complex relationship...

THIS WEEK'S SEMINAR

Would you be able to meet and form a relationship with the person who killed your child?

Is it important to stop and think in every moment?
