Mrs Berry and I have key students in our office that we make decisions on...

- Superstars – these are students that are shining bright. The students you want to be around and the students that have guaranteed success in life. These will be the biggest smiles and the greatest excitement on GCSE results day. Watching from a far a the 'disruptors' commiserate.
- Disruptors – these are the students that have a laugh with their 'mates' before their education. The students that may seem 'fun' at the time but take learning opportunities away from others. You'll see them regularly arrive late and when they do, they don't value education. They don't yet realise that when they see the negative impact on GCSE results day, their 'mates' won't be around for them anymore. They are the joke now!

REMOVING BARRIERS

More work will be done to ensure the disruptors don't infect our year group aspiration and goals to succeed.

REMOVING BARRIERS

Participant: this attendee, sometimes called a "Player," is happy to be there. They want to learn, and is enthusiastic and fully engaged with the process.

Passenger: this person is physically in the room, but that's about it. They're just along for the ride. They have no intention of disrupting the session, but neither will he engage with it or play an active role. They may treat the session as a diversion from the "day job," or see it as irrelevant to their role.

Protester: They don't want to be there, and will let everyone know about it! A Protester will often disagree with everything, and generally go out of their way to make the experience as unpleasant as possible for everyone. Chances are, they think the session is an irritating addition to a heavy workload or is keeping them away from work with an important deadline. Or, they may be troubled by something completely unrelated to work.

Prisoner: like the Passenger, they are resigned to being there but, like the Protester, they feel trapped and just wants to escape. Unlike the Protester, however, they are not confrontational. Instead, their behavior and body language (folded arms, sullen demeanor) can speak volumes.

Which one are you?

Things to remember when getting your (very) early Mock Results

For the first time ever, we held extremely early Mock exams for Y10 in English, Maths and Science. The most important reasons for this were...

- To experience the official exam process and expectations.
- To understand the need and discipline of revision in the run-up to exams.
- To understand the importance of knowing the exam boards you are following.
- To bring about conversation and thinking about 'the real thing' and the dedication that comes with this.

IMPORTANT THINGS TO REMEMBER...

- Grades won't be high! You are not even 1 year through your GCSE studies.
- Whatever the 'grade', the most important thing is the questions you should be going through in your E/M/S lessons and understanding/discussing the structures in which you should be answering.

Remember!

Things we need to get our head around over Easter

- ✓ Try the revision templates on the next slides.
- ✓ Get ahead of the game in preparing for the real things.
- ✓ Use your Mock exam papers as part of some home study over Easter.
