How many dangers can you think of that you may be more at risk of in the summer?

STAY SAFE THIS SUMMER

- Online safety
- Water Safety
- Sun / Heat safety
- Rail Safety
- Wellbeing safety

Along with outings and Summer activities, screentime among young people is likely to increase a lot over the holidays. Thankfully National Online Safety has provided useful tips for operating online. Firstly, be kind to people and maybe share some feel-good content to spread positivity, try to take breaks and avoid binge-streaming shows or playing games all day, finally, why not have some screen-free time before bed and wake up ready to enjoy another day of Summer?

Enhance Your Mental Health this Summer

By Jason Prinster, PhD
Director of Primary Care
Behavioral Health

Summer is a great time to focus on enhancing your mental health and mood.

STAY ACTIVE OUTDOORS:

Engage in outdoor activities like walking, jogging, or cycling. Exercise is vital for mental and physical health. Sunlight exposure can also help regulate your circadian rhythm and boost vitamin D levels, which are linked to mood improvement.

PRACTICE MINDFULNESS

Take some time to practice (or learn) mindfulness exercises in an outdoor space. Being present and just observing in nature can reduce stress and promote relaxation. Mindfulness is evidence-based, with numerous studies showing its effectiveness in reducing stress, improving emotional regulation, and enhancing overall psychological well-being.

STAY CONNECTED:

Maintain social connections by planning gatherings with friends and family, or just reach out to friends and families to talk or tell them that you love them! Social support is crucial for mental wellbeing. Research consistently demonstrates that strong social connections are associated with reduced risk of mental health disorders, increased resilience to stress, and overall improved quality of life.

STAY HYDRATED AND EAT WELL:

Drink plenty of water throughout the day and incorporate seasonal fruits and vegetables into your diet. Diet plays a crucial role in mood regulation as certain nutrients influence neurotransmitter production and inflammation levels, impacting emotional stability and mental health.

By incorporating these tips into your summer routine, you can support your mental health and enjoy the season to its fullest. Remember, small changes can make a big difference in how you feel mentally and emotionally.

Summer is a time where you might spend more time at home, disconnect with peers and find yourself at a loose end. This can sometimes lead to feelings of loneliness and comparing your holiday to others', often portraying their 'best moments' on social media.

It is important to take time for yourself, do things you enjoy and find things that boost your mood!
